

Farm Science Review

Written By: Claire Henry

Edited By: Allie Hundley

This year the Greenon FFA chapter attended the 2022 Farm Science Review. This was an incredible opportunity to attend the largest farm show in the midwest, being only 30 minutes away. The event is first a great social event. Students in our chapter were able to get out of the classroom and go explore FSR with friends while also being able to meet new people. Along with that students were able to talk to many different people from all over and from the many different branches of agriculture. Greenon FFA is made up of students from many different backgrounds and being able to attend Farm Science Review showed students the many different sides to agriculture.

Students in our chapter took away many memories and great lessons from the Farm Science Review. Greenon students discussed their favorite parts as seeing the variety of technological advances of farming equipment, getting a walking stick, seeing cows, getting to learn about ag companies, and of course, the food. As a senior at Greenon, my favorite part was getting to talk to colleges as well as people in many different careers. I am undecided on what my future holds for me so getting to talk to people and hear about their experiences is something that I took away from Farm Science Review and is now helping me with my future. When underclassmen ask whether or not they should attend Farm Science Review, my answer will always be yes because the memories I have made and the things I have learned there, I will always be grateful for.

